Center for Human Evolutionary Studies

2018-2019 LECTURE SERIES

Ruth Adams Building, Room 001, 3:30pm

The Past (and Future?) of Our Crop Plants in Changing Global Environments
Dolores Piperno (Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History), September 14

The Evolution of Human Carnivory: Evidence from Modern and Fossil Taphonomic Studies
Briana Pobiner (Smithsonian Institution), October 12

Male Takeovers and Infanticide Risk: Broadening the Scope of Potential Costs
Amy Lu (State University of New York, Stony Brook), November 2

Is the Gut Microbiome Part of the Missing Genetic Dark Matter?
Liping Zhao (Rutgers University), November 30

The Sensory Ecology of Food Detection and Selection by Wild White-Faced Capuchin Monkeys
Amanda Melin (University of Calgary), February 1

Hips in Human Evolution
Ashley Hammond (American Museum of Natural History), March 8

The Evolution of Morality
Stephen Stich (Rutgers University), April 5

Sex Differences in Hadza Hunter-Gatherer Space Use and Spatial Cognition
Brian Wood (University of California, Los Angeles), April 19

evolution.rutgers.edu